HAWAIIAN VOYAGERS and health at the National Library of Medicine |

Tina Shelton

By Tina Shelton on February 21, 2014 in News

Virginia Tanji, Health Sciences Librarian at the University of Hawai`i John A. Burns School of Medicine, was Chair of the Board of Regents of the National Library of Medicine when a new exhibit, Native Peoples' Concepts of Health and Illness, opened in late 2011. In this 1:51 video, she and Dr. Marjorie Mau, professor in the UH Department of Native Hawaiian Health, explain why the exhibit is worth a visit, in Washington, DC, or on line.

Slides

Have AN MD (to be) WASH YOUR CAR on May 18 (Tickets available now)

REMEMBRANCE: Professor Tom Humphreys, teacher and biotech pioneer